GLATFELTER AND DREAMWEAVER WIN EXCELLENCE AWARD AT INDEX 2017

York, PA – April 7, 2017 – Glatfelter (NYSE: GLT) announced today its Composite Fibers business unit, in partnership with Dreamweaver International, Inc., won an award for the Dreamweaver Gold 20™ product as the “best finished product made from, or incorporating nonwovens”.

Dreamweaver and Glatfelter have developed Dreamweaver Gold 20™, a lithium ion battery separator made from a combination of nanofibers and microfibers whose thermally stable materials are designed to prevent self-ignition. “The team is very proud and excited for the future of this product as we work through the qualification process,” said Martin Rapp, Senior Vice President and Business Unit President, Composite Fibers.

The new cost-effective design delivers the normal electrical performance that is typically achieved with electrode materials in the battery, and provides enhanced product safety given its thermal stability.

A total of eight award categories were available. Award nominees along with other industry professionals gathered to learn of the award winners as presented at this week’s INDEX™ 17 nonwovens exhibition in Geneva, Switzerland.

Glatfelter is proud of its partnership with Dreamweaver and is looking forward to continuing on the path of enhancing everyday life.
